Dear Hanna:

Thanks for your note of 17 January, which arrived a couple of days ago. I have had a lot of hard work the last four or five months, putting my command together and getting it successfully deployed in action. Now, when the Corps is functioning in first-class manner, and the growing pains are over, I am being moved on to other responsibilities! I wish that events could have turned out differently as I feel very sick at heart at leaving such a grand lot of officers and men. However, personal desires have no part in this game so it is no use indulging in any regrets.

The fighting of the last couple of months has been extraordinarily reminiscent of the Somme in 1916 - also the conditions which the troops have had to endure. The better weather is now due, however, and, in consequence, this situation should soon change.

If and when I come home, I shall certainly bring back with me an intense desire for a good holiday and, if the weather permits, all I wish to take of sailing, fishing and golf. If that represents "the common touch", I shall bring with me a fair size pack. I cannot claim that this desire represents anything of value to anyone else, but I certainly know that I possess it!

Friends.

Yours,

(H.D.G. Crerar)
